

Now we're going to take part in an activity to get ourselves warmed up and learn the four main compass directions which are North, South, East and West. A compass is normally used in order to point towards magnetic north and allows us to ensure that our map is pointing the correct direction.

For this activity you will need to get yourself to a big open space such as your garden or a local park. You will need to choose 4 directions or edges to the area and label them North, South, East and West like the compass drawing above. You might want to have a friend help you with this activity to help shout where you need to go. In the resources section open the North South East West Game pack there is a list of places from around the world. You need to work out approximately what direction each of these places are relative to where you live. So, for example if you are watching this in London and the first place was Scotland you should run to the point in the playing area you have labelled as north. Get a friend, sibling or adult to shout out the locations one at a time. Double check you have the right direction after using a map or Google Maps. Good Luck!
