

Artwork by Robert Baden-Powell

Scouting's founder, Robert Baden-Powell, was a talented artist and enjoyed sketching and painting throughout his life. He supplied all the original drawings for his bestselling book 'Scouting for Boys' which provided inspiration for so many.

This pack contains a selection of the artwork held in The Scouts Heritage Collection. It shows his enjoyment for capturing his environment whether it was whilst travelling, in the Army or in his role as Chief Scout. His sketches show a sense of humour and demonstrate his talent for engaging his audience in the subject.

Binzeru, The Japanese God of Healing. One day when sitting with the other 15 gods in the Temple Binzeru remarked to his neighbour, "My word! But that's a good looking girl coming up as a suppliant!" For this impropriety he was put outside the Temple, and he sits in the verandah now. Still, he is the most popular, because the most human, among the Japanese deities. April 1912.
