

A Million Hands themes information

WWF

Our natural world is under threat like never before but – with a little help from our friends at WWF – Scouts is fighting to protect it while there's still time. WWF restore thriving habitats, bring species back from the brink, and tackle the root causes behind nature's decline (such as climate change).

Mind, SAMH (Scotland), Inspire (Northern Ireland)

One in ten young people in the UK has a mental health problem that could stop them experiencing life to the fullest. Research shows that young people don't always understand what mental health is – or how to look after it.

Working alongside Mind, SAMH, and Inspire, Scouts are empowering people to take good care of their mental health, now and in the future.

Save the Children

Wherever they're from and wherever they live, all children deserve to grow up in safe and secure surroundings.

Scouts is partnering with Save the Children to combat stereotypes and raise awareness of the issues facing displaced children. Scouts are also working to build welcoming communities and connect with fellow Scouts in areas affected by conflict.

Crisis, The Simon Community (Northern Ireland)

Homelessness isn't inevitable. With the right solutions in place, we can build a fairer society where everyone has a safe home to call their own.

Partnering with Crisis and Simon Community NI, Scouts is helping young people understand the many factors that contribute to homelessness – and showing them how they can help end the problem for good.

National Autistic Society

Public understanding of disability has come a long way, but there's still so much we can do to increase opportunities, reduce social isolation, and create spaces where everyone can thrive.

With support from the National Autistic Society, Scouts will become advocates for inclusion and build a more considerate world.

British Red Cross

As Scouts, we believe acts of kindness have the power to transform society and make it easier for everyone to get the help they need.

Supported by the British Red Cross, Scouts are going to show kindness to those who need it most (both at home and overseas), and encourage others to do the same by planning a kindness project for their community.

This could include tackling loneliness in the community, helping your community prepare for emergencies, promoting awareness of the bystander effect and lifesaving first aid, supporting people in crisis through the British Red Cross or planning their own project to help people in the community, for example supporting a food bank.
